Coup d'état and Assassination Plan Unveiled in Venezuela

The conspiracy plot in Venezuela against the constitutional government of Nicolás Maduro has been underway since February 12th despite the obvious failure of the street violence actions in the form of guarimbas used to encourage a popular uprising against the legitimate government.

The high political command of the Bolivarian Revolution presented evidence showing that the Venezuelan and international right wing is perpetrating a continuous coup d'état that would lead to the assassination of President Maduro which would unleash a bloodbath in the country and create the conditions for a foreign intervention in Venezuelan according to the script prepared by the national and international extreme right wing to finish the Venezuelan revolutionary process.

Mayor of Libertador municipality Jorge Rodríguez presented the data collected by Venezuelan security agencies, which point Maria Corina Machado as the main leader of this plot involving the “annihilation” of President Nicolas Maduro.

“We received some evidence collected by the Venezuela’s administration of justice, through the Venezuelan Public Ministry, about the ongoing continuous coup and the assassination attempt against President Nicolas Maduro. We, the high political command, are here addressing this complaint to Venezuela and the world in order to stop this madness, and show publicly this attempt and therefore prevent these criminal acts,” said Mayor Rodriguez.

According to the information of security agencies, the plan includes fundraising by the extreme right-wing to try to assassinate the president.

The participation of Maria Corina Machado in this conspiracy against Venezuela was evidenced by an email sent to Mr. Diego Arria on May 23rd in which the former representative to the National Assembly shows her despair because of Nicolás Maduro permanence in power.

“I’m fed up with waiting. We have to take out this trash, starting with the one heading it and by taking advantage of the world situation with Ukraine and Thailand as soon as possible,” wrote the extreme right-wing representative in the email she sent to Diego Arria, former Venezuelan diplomat who worked for the Fourth Republic governments.

It is important to remember that, as a representative to the National Assembly, Maria Corina Machado was one of the organizers of the violent street actions that began on February 12th and whose aim was to overthrow President Maduro. Machado has a long history of joint work with U.S. officials to destabilize Venezuela, and she is remembered for her visit in 2005 to the White House, where she was received by George W Bush.

In her effort to put an end to the Bolivarian Revolution, she accepted being appointed as ambassador to Panama, whose government openly conspired against Venezuela. This is the reason why she lost her parliamentary seat.

In the email she sent to Diego Arria, Machado complained that the plan is quite delayed and warns that it is necessary to accelerate the ending. “ I think it is time to gather efforts; make the necessary calls, and obtain financing to annihilate Maduro and the rest will fall apart,” says the leader of the Venezuelan opposition.

“Whitaker reconfirmed his support”

In another email sent by Maria Corina Machado to former deputy of COPEI, Gustavo Tarre, she stated that the U.S. Ambassador to Colombia, Kevin Whitaker, confirmed his support to the conspiracy and he determined the path to continue the plan. “I have already made up my mind and this fight will continue until this regime is overthrown and we deliver to our friends in the world. If I went to San Cristobal and exposed myself before the OAS, I fear nothing. Kevin Whitaker has already reconfirmed his support and he pointed out the new steps. We have a check book stronger than the regime’s to break the international security ring,” Machado wrote through his account 77gaia@gmail.com.

The assassination plan presented by Maria Corina Machado was supported by Pedro Burelli, an everlasting conspirator against Venezuela who lives in the United States and answered a question in this regard sent by Diego Arria via e-mail on May 25th.

“You asked my opinion about the determination of MCM and I think that’s the attitude, we’ll go all out for everything and with everything, and against everything. We count on the support of the Department, the Embassy and the upcoming Senate’s sanctions,” said Pedro Burelli.

The sources of funds for this criminal operation against Venezuela include the fugitive businessman Eligio Cedeño, who fled to the United States after being accused of fraudulent banking operations. Cedeño was arrested in 2007 on charges of evading currency controls to obtain dollars illegally. This fugitive was released by a decision made by Judge Maria Afiuni, who is being prosecuted for this action and is accused of crimes of corruption, abuse of authority, favoring evasion and criminal association.

“Eligio knows exactly what he has to do and he asked me to give you a message of absolute confidence in our organizational capacity for other phases of the struggle for our beloved Venezuela. Being so, we are going for more and we are going to keep encouraging with these efforts the agitation of young people, especially students,” wrote María Corina Machado in an email sent on May 12th to Henrique Salas Römer.

Eligio Cedeno, Pedro Burelli and Gustavo Tovar Arroyo were the organizers of a meeting in 2010, known as the “Fiesta Mexicana” (The Mexican Party), where Serb facilitators trained extreme right-wing young Venezuelans to execute subversive activities in Venezuela by following the soft coup plan designed by the U.S. Gene Sharp.

Another evidence presented by the high political command of the Revolution is an email sent on March 25th by the extreme right-wing activist Ricardo Koesling to the fugitive of the Venezuelan justice Robert Alonso, who in 2004 organized a raid of Colombian paramilitaries in Venezuela who came to assassinate President Hugo Chávez.

Alonso is the creator and promoter of the “guarimbas,” a criminal street agitation methodology that was implemented in Venezuela, resulting in deaths and injured people after calling for the overthrow of Nicolás Maduro on February 12th. Robert Alonso has been very active through the social networks by encouraging the political agitation in Venezuela and suggesting the use of children by the opposition as human shields in street demonstrations. He is also the author of a manual to behead motorcyclists at the barricades.

In the email written by Koesling, there is a video in which you can see a silhouette of President Nicolás Maduro riddled with bullets by him (Koesling). This looks like training for the assassination.

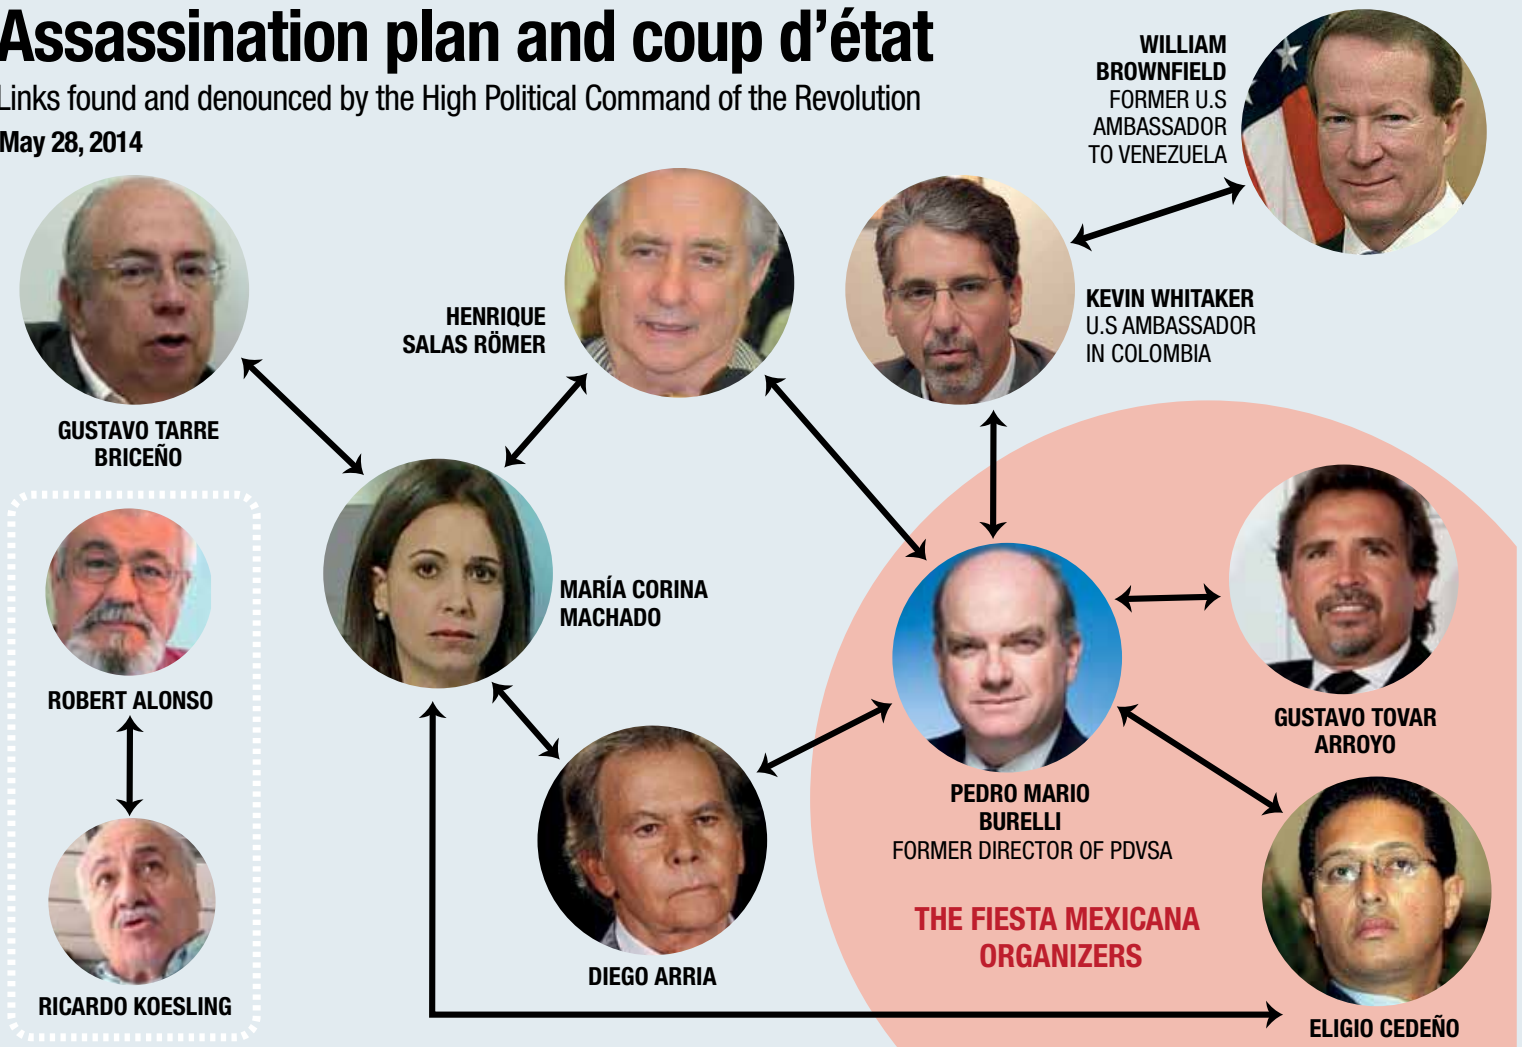

“Your courage inspired me because nobody has more guts than you in this shit. Watch it and give me your opinion. I hope you enjoy it and upload that shit so everybody can see it. I’m all worn out, but I’m sure others will find inspiration in it and be filled with courage to end this once and for all,” said Koesling to Alonso in the email.

All this evidence proves that the street actions that began on February 12th, presented as student protests, were not spontaneous. The content of emails sent by Maria Corina Machado and other opposition leaders confirms the existence of a plan designed by the national and international extreme right wing to destabilize and overthrow the legitimate government of Venezuela.

MARIA CORINA MACHADO
Member of a wealthy family which owns the main iron and steel company of Venezuela. Such company was purchased by the State in 2010. Since the beginning of the Bolivarian Government, she started an intense political activity to overthrow it. Machado was elected as representative of the National Assembly in 2010, but she lost her seat in March 2014, when she accepted to represent Panama before the OAS.

GUSTAVO TARRE BRICEÑO
A former leader of the Social Christian Party of Venezuela (Copei, founded by former President Rafael Caldera), Briceño was a Congress representative since 1979 for at least 20 years. He took part in the energy and financing commissions. He is currently an attorney and a business adviser for private companies.

GUSTAVO TOVAR ARROYO
An attorney and a propagandist of the right wing, he holds both Mexican and Venezuelan nationalities. In 2010, Briceño organized the Fiesta Mexicana (Mexican Party), a meeting of young Venezuelans aiming at articulating a movement to overthrow President Chávez. Tovar is head and founder of several non partisan political organizations that promote the values of capital.

PEDRO MARIO BURELLI BRICEÑO
Son of Miguel Angel Burelli Rivas, a former foreign minister and intellectual. Burelli Briceño was an external director at the State owned company PDVSA and supporter of the private capital opening passed in the 90's. He lives in Washington. He is a link between the traditional Venezuelan political parties and the U.S government high representatives. He was a link to organize the Fiesta Mexicana (Mexican Party)

ELIGIO CEDEÑO
Banker and founder of Bolívar Banco, a financial institution for VIPs and middle class profiles. He participated in a foreign currency exchange fraud, so he was sentenced guilty and imprisoned in 2007. He escaped in December 2009, having a judge as an accomplice. Since then, he lives in Florida where he carries out his business activities and supports with a lot of money the conspiracy actions against Venezuela. He financed the Fiesta Mexicana.

DIEGO ARRIA
An economist who held the posts of minister of Information and Tourism and mayor of Caracas during the first term of the social democrat Carlos Andrés Pérez (1974-1978). After leaving those posts, where he was accused of irregular purchases, Arria started to show a wealthy lifestyle. He claims anticommunist ideas and is a radical activist of the right wing opposition.

HENRIQUE SALAS ROMER
An attorney close to the importing families established in Puerto Cabello and to the industrial activity in the capital city of the state of Carabobo. Salas was mayor of Carabobo, elected by direct vote, representing his own right wing political movement Proyecto Venezuela and supported by entrepreneurs. He is currently boosting alliances with some far right wing young groups that operate in the university centers of the state.

ROBERT ALONSO
Son of a Cuban family with radical anticommunist ideas. In 2004 his name became popular because more than 60 Colombian paramilitaries were found in his ranch Daktari (in the outskirts of Caracas) where they planned an attack on the presidential palace. He fled to Miami from where he has promoted a large number of violent street demonstrations that he labels as "guarimbas".

KEVIN WHITAKER
An experienced American diplomat who was just appointed ambassador to Colombia. Whitaker worked as Assistant Secretary of State for South America. In 2005, he was appointed deputy Chief of the U.S. Embassy Mission in Venezuela together with Ambassador William Brownfield.

RICARDO KOESLING
An attorney linked to the traditionally anticommunist sectors of the counter-insurgency polices of Venezuela before the triumph of the revolution. Koesling took part in the siege against the embassy of Cuba in April 2002, during the failed coup d'état.

WILLIAM BROWNFIELD
An American diplomat and former U.S. ambassador to Chile, Venezuela and Colombia. He worked in Venezuela from 2004 until 2007.

The welcome in Canada was wonderful, and so was the deputies' support. At least there is not a Brazilian Chavista Senator.

With the support of the European Parliament, that of the State and the U.S. Senate, which are doing what they promised, the international lobby is at its best moment since this fight started.

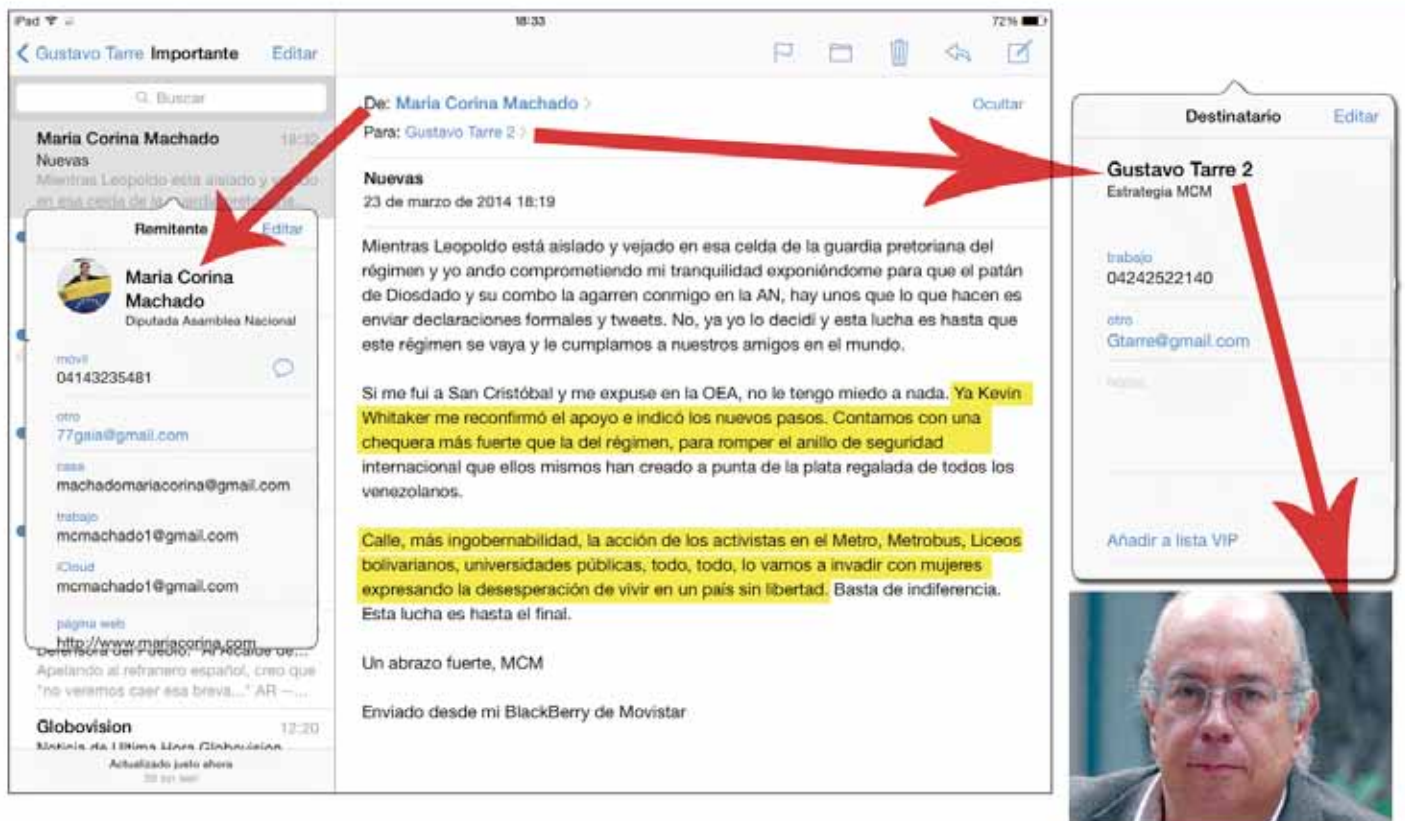

Eligio knows exactly what he has to do and he asked me to give you a message of absolute confidence in our organizational capacity for other phases of the struggle for our beloved Venezuela. Being so, we are going for more and we are going to keep encouraging with these efforts the agitation of young people, especially students. Setting resolution 058 as the focus of attention worked, but not 100% as it is required by what we have lost and what we want to recover. We're going for more.

I have given one or two steps that other cowards don't dare to give. And I will give three, four and five if necessary. If I have to block a street myself, I'm going to do it to set an example.

While Leopoldo López is isolated and humiliated in that prison of the Praetorian Guard of the regime, and I'm exposing myself so that the thug Diosdado and his allies attack me in the National Assembly, some people just send formal statements and tweets. No, I have already made up my mind and this fight will continue until this regime is overthrown and we deliver to our friends in the world.

If I went to San Cristobal and exposed myself before the OAS, I fear nothing. Kevin Whitaker has already reconfirmed his support and he pointed out the new steps.

We have a check book stronger than the regime's to break the international security ring they have created thanks to the Venezuelan people's money they have been giving away as a present.

Streets, more ungovernability, action of activists in the subway, Metrobus, Bolivarian high schools, public universities, and everything... We will invade everything with women expressing despair for living in a country without freedom. No more indifference. We will struggle to the end.

A big hug, MCM

Diego,

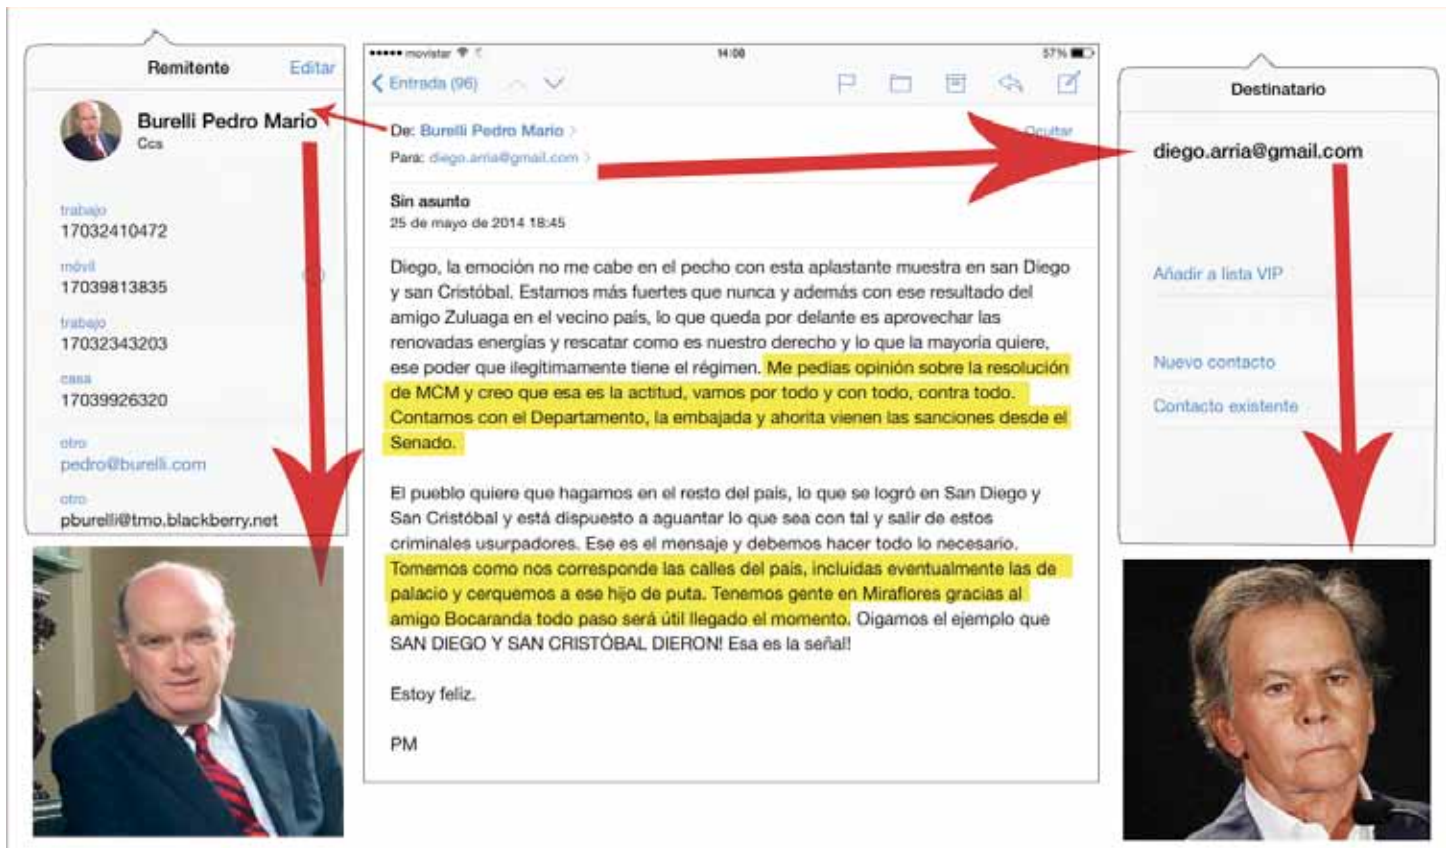

It is truth that the arrangement of the international strategy has been successful. This is pretty good but it is not enough because everything is taking too long, and it is not enough for us that these boys are holding assemblies while we are in talks with our friends abroad. This is a path that's become way too long since this government came to power by fraud.

I'm fed up with waiting. We have to take out this trash, starting with the one heading it and by taking advantage of the world situation with Ukraine and Thailand as soon as possible. We can not allow that while the initial momentum of the boys faded, we have been traveling and giving speeches in the international arena. No. I'm sorry I did not support you from the beginning but now it's time for me to convince you. I think it is time to gather efforts; make the necessary calls, and obtain financing to annihilate Maduro and the rest will fall apart.

Diego, I'm so excited about this crushing victory in San Diego and San Cristóbal. We are stronger than ever and this includes the results of my friend Zuloaga in the neighbouring country. What lies ahead is to harness the renewed energy and recover our right and what people want the most, the power the regime illegally holds. You asked my opinion about the determination of MCM and I think that's the attitude, we'll go all out for everything and with everything, and against everything. We count on the support of the Department, the Embassy and the upcoming Senate's sanctions.

The people want us to achieve in the country what we achieved in San Diego and San Cristobal and they are willing to endure whatever just to get rid of these criminal usurpers. This is the message and we must do whatever it takes.

Let's take the streets of the country as it has to be, including the streets nearby the Palace and eventually surround that son of a bitch. We have some people in Miraflores thanks to our friend Bocaranda. Every step will be useful when the time comes. Let's follow the example San Cristobal and San Diego gave! That's the sign!

I'm happy

Hi, Henrique. Otto, or any other one who is not from the extreme right-wing because they are on a path I do not understand and it can end up helping the regime. Unfortunately, Brownfield is not there.

If you want to see Otto, the only thing I can say is that he is the mouthpiece of that Venezuelan gentleman known as Emilio Cedeño. What money is able to do!!!

Talking to Kevin is almost the same as talking to Brownfield.

The moment had come.

Yes, I called.

María Corina called me scared this morning (her father told her about Maduro's statements on how well informed he is by intelligence services). She asked for my opinion. So I relaxed and told her what I think. There are three possible scenarios:

1) We keep on fighting as we have done and bet on a tie between Capriles and Maduro in the 8D elections, and wait for the eventual cost: Maduro will end up wearing out.

2) We change the strategy when the 8D strong campaign starts in order to gain the strong vote of the opposition and the disappointed chavistas, study what Chávez offered, what Maduro offers and attack his faults, compare the live one with the dead one, the development model offered by Chávez and Maduro's disaster.

3) We take advantage of this campaign's platform to catch votes similar to the ones we obtain in the 14A election and assess the initiative I've been talking about, which is based on the argument that we need more political leadership than electoral candidates in a highly uncertain scenario. I feel she became interested since she did not rule it out, nor she refused. She clung to these ideas. By the way, she said nice things about you and Henrique Fernando.
